

In Potter's Field

By: Aneta Kenny – Brandon, MB

Grey stones lean in weary disarray,
Holding desperate heads above the grass
That ripples on the mounds.

Here is but the silence of decay,
Reaching out to those who chance to pass
With muted insect sounds.

Desolation holds this human clay,
Scorned, reviled, a miserable outcast
In all but Heaven's bounds.

© 2003